In summary, it is the judgment of the Foundation that Abdirahman Yasin Mohamed has the equivalent of a bachelor's degree in business administration plus 21 semester hours of graduate-level credit from a regionally accredited college or university in the United States.

The Foundation's evaluations serve as suggested guidelines and are advisory in nature. Under no circumstance does the Foundation desire to encroach on the individual autonomy, residence requirements or internal policies of educational institutions. The documents were signed by the appropriate officials and photocopies were submitted to FIS for evaluation.

The Foundation's equivalency determinations are arrived at using multiple source materials and a well-developed evaluation methodology supported by thorough comparative education research and industry-standard training. FIS evaluators are international education professionals with expertise in both foreign education systems and U.S. higher education. Many FIS evaluators have had prior experience working in university admission departments, registrar offices and international services units. In addition to having a reference collection of well over one million foreign credentials, FIS evaluators have exclusive access to an extensive research library which includes print materials such as reference manuals, books, and periodicals, as well as electronic materials. The materials used in this particular evaluation include the NAFSA: Association of International Educators publication titled A Guide to Educational Systems Around the World, the AACRAO-AID Project's Country Guide Series Report titled "Somalia", the UNESCO Association of African Universities/International Association of Universities publication titled Guide to Higher Education in Africa, the ECE publication titled The Educational System of Turkey and the AACRAO Electronic Database for Global Education (EDGE).
